LONDON, MARCH 15.

It is faid that there is little or nodechte a war between Russia and France. To b is to be attributed Buonaparte's fenante fultum for calling out a fresh conferipion 120,000 men. Troops have for tome in 120,000 men. Troops have for tome the been filing off from the departments conigs ous to the Rhine into Germany. The trees that were on the Elbe, and feemed to rea tate an attack upon Holflein, have fucien marched to the Pruthan frontier. where large force is already affembled. Cauliford is recalled, but not wishing to announce h intentions immediately, Buonaparte has a pointed Lauriston to lucceed him. Irms ately after the appointment he ferds Lauria on another mission into Italy. It's faid to be a war of Buonaparte's own fering, This may furprife fome who think held work enough on his hands already in Sas and Portugal, and who imagined that Refa had conceived this to be a favourable opport tunity for Making off his baleful influence, But it will be recollected that he was equity at war with Spain, when he fought the had cause of quarrel with Austria. He made aided by this very Russia whom hadrates an attack upon ! he will had a constant to the constan fifted by the emperor of Austria. fia helped him to beat down ! There cause of dispute is the kingdom of Polad. Buonaparte infifts upon establishing that king dom at the expense of the Polish territors of Russia. He accompanies that dented with the affionting feizure of the emparate Alexander's brother-in-law, and with regarding the refloration of Finland, which held guaranteed to Russia. Drained by the war with Turkey, impoverished by the war with England, this, in the opinion of Buonapara, may be the favourable moment for attacking Ruffia. As far as relates to us, the wart! open the Baltic to us, and we shall of cruie fend a powerful fleet to take advantage d any events that may occur. That there's any hope of connecting Sweden with Rull we do not believe. Spain and Portugal vibe afforded another opportunity, another be afforded another opportunity, another breathing time, of which, we trust, they war make ule to organize, discipline and increat their armies. The war with Russia, should that event take place, will be turned to be ter account by the Patriots; we hope the the war with Austria was.

Capt. Roberts has also favoured us with the transcript of another article of information received on the day of his departure, which fays, "Gen. Graham landed from Cadiz, with a body of British, Portuguese and Spanish troops, and has gained a victory near Chiclana, in which the French general Ruffin was killed. The battle is represented as being very obstinately contested, and in which the allies lost between 1,000 and 1200 men, in killed." The Portuguese are represented in high spirits, and seel the utmost considence in the assied armies, and calculate that the French will be driven out of Portugal before the middle of April-Provisions from the very large number of arrivals had rather declined, but it was supposed the fall would be only temporary.

Translated from the Lisbon Gazette of the 15th of March.

It is reported that the French army has halted between Pombal and Miranda de Corvo and its neighbourhood. Col. Trant occupied Coimbra and the right fide of the Mondego. Another body of militia was posted be-yond Alva. We momently expect information of the utmost importance.

An expedition which had failed from Cadiz, had landed at Tarifa. Algestras and Conil, had been reinforced by a body of British troops from Sicily. Letters from Algarhe advise, that the troops composing this expedition, had advanced and taken possession of Medina Sidonia, and were marching to Chi-clana to attack, Victor's army. PHILADELPHIA, APRIL 16, Yesterday morning the body of a man was found in South-street, near Fourth-street bruised in the most slicking manner. It was at first tho't that he was alive but a clofer examination shewed that the breath had forever ceased to animate the body. It is supposed that his death was occasioned by a blow from a brickbat which fractured his skull, part of which was taken from the wound! His name was Robert M'Call, brother to Mr. Andrew M'Call a respectable tobacconist in Wilmington, Delaware.

The verdict of the inquest was wilful murder by some person or persons unknown.

Extract of a letter from a respectable gen tleman at Fort Stoddart, to his friend in Baltimore, dated March 13, 1811.

" I wrote to you a short time since giving you an account of our movement to this place; and inform you at this time, that there has been a report in circulation here for several days, stating that a British sheet had left the Havanna, destined for Pensacola which report is confirmed by a gentleman who arrived here this morning direct from Penfacola which place he left on the 6th inft, and on whose veracity I am informed I can reply; stating that two brigs had arrived at Pensacola laden with arms and ammunition, which were landing; that the fleet was lying at the Barracas, which is about 9 miles below: but does not know the number, that there had been great rejoicings at Pensacola in consequence of the arrival of the fleet, and that preparations were making to give up the place to the British. There is another report that the Spaniards will not give up Mobile. It is a report of confiderable importance, and if our government intends to take possession of it, now is the time as they have but few troops there."

We are authorifed to state, that Mr. Pinkney would not sail from England before the first week in April. Mr. Foster was to sail for the United States about the same timefo that their arrival may not be expected before the fift of May. [N. Y. Gaz.]
